Keller Graduate School of Management Among Best Business Schools for Military Service Members and Veterans

2015-04-02

Academic quality, student support and university culture among qualifications for "Best for Vets: Business Schools 2015"

DOWNERS GROVE, Ill.--(BUSINESS WIRE)-- DeVry University's Keller Graduate School of Management is recognized by the Military Times in its annual Best for Vets: Business Schools 2015 ranking of the top 75 educational providers of graduate business degrees for military service members and veterans. Results are based on statistics from the U.S. Department of Education, academic success measures and survey responses from more than 150 schools.

"DeVry University is proud to support America's veterans in reaching their academic and career goals by assisting them as they transition from military life, to the classroom, to a new career," said Robert Paul, president of DeVry University. "We work closely with all students, including those in the military, to complete their educational plans, identify potential barriers to success and review resources to overcome those barriers. In every interaction, we strive to do what is in the best interest of the veteran."

Colleges and universities selected for inclusion in Best for Vets: Business Schools 2015 were evaluated in five categories: university culture, student support, academic outcomes and quality, academic policies, and cost and financial aid.

Commitment to the Military Community

For decades, DeVry University has had the honor of educating America's military. Starting in the 1940s, DeVry was selected by the U.S. Government to educate Army Air Corps instructors on electronic devices. Following WWII, DeVry became one of the first schools approved to use the original G.I. Bill®[1]. Today, DeVry University remains committed to our soldiers' success as they serve our country and achieve their educational goals.
