American Way Names Winners of Annual ‘Road Warrior’ Contest

What Do Chocolate, Squid and a Nonprofit Have in Common?

FORT WORTH, Texas – American Way, the award-winning inflight magazine of American Airlines, today reveals the five winners of its 11th Annual Road Warrior Contest. The magazine’s March 15 issue showcases the winners on its cover and in the feature story.

“We love being able to reward our customers every year with the annual Road Warrior Contest,” said Adam Pitluk, editor of American Way. “These entrants continue to be our most loyal customers and we are excited to be able to recognize them for all of the travel they do.”

In July and August 2012, American Way invited readers to enter the contest, whereby they were asked to complete a series of tasks, explaining in creative ways why they thought they were worthy of the honor (and prizes) that come with the elite Road Warrior title.

Contestants were asked to compose an essay describing why their road warrior lifestyle puts them in a travel category far above the norm. To liven up the contest, at least 10 idioms had to be woven into the stories for qualification. They also had to provide an example of their typical two-week travel schedule, as well as complete other tasks depicting their robust travel lives.

In November, after the thousands of entries were narrowed down to a group of five finalists, readers were invited to go online and vote for their favorite contender. When the month-long voting process ended, the Grand Prize, Second Prize and three Third Prize winners were notified.

The readers of American Way have selected the following winners:

- Grand Prize – Gillian Smith of Miami is Chief Marketing Officer for City Year, an education-focused nonprofit organization. Smith flies nearly every week to meet with teachers in public schools across the U.S. on her mission to keep students in school and on track to succeed. In true nonprofit fashion, Smith is donating the Grand Prize AAdvantage® miles she won to City Year.
- Second Prize – Jerry Swain of Solana Beach, Calif., is Founder and CEO of Jer’s Chocolates. In his essay, Swain shared about how he began creating his signature chocolates and how getting his confections around the globe is the reason he can be found in the sky more than on the ground.

• Third Prize – Flory Ellis of Playa del Rey, Calif., is Director of Export Management for Northrop Grumman, a major aerospace and defense company. Ellis travels routinely, and had accumulated more than 1 million miles before age 35; Michele Nishiguchi of Las Cruces, N.M., is a professor of biology at New Mexico State University who studies squid. Because Nishiguchi lives in a landlocked state, she must travel to oceanic areas of the world such as Hawaii and Australia to collect and transport squid for her research; Ruban Selvakumar of Los Angeles works for GFT as the co-head of a hedge fund-tech consulting team and is also part-owner of the software company G2 FinTech, which develops tax analysis software. Selvakumar travels the world and in his words, “Helps rich people get richer by day, and ensure they pay their taxes by night.”

The Grand Prize winner received 500,000 AAdvantage® miles, the Second Prize winner received 300,000 AAdvantage miles and the three Third Prize winners each received 200,000 AAdvantage miles. Additionally, each of the five contestants won a Bose® Wave® music system, a pair of Bose® QuietComfort® 15 Acoustic Noise Cancelling® headphones, five Rental Rewards Days from Avis®, a Samsung Galaxy S® III smartphone and a Samsung Galaxy Tab®.

The winners’ photo shoot took place at the luxurious Grand Del Mar in San Diego. Winners and their guests were treated like celebrities for a week of pampering, which included Avis Chauffeur Drive® by WeDriveU® Chauffeur Service.
