GoPro Named Exclusive Action Camera of Red Bull Rampage, the World's Biggest Freeride Mountain Bike Event

10/13/2023

GoPro Athletes Brendan Fairclough and Bienvenido Aguado Alba Selected to Compete Among the Elite Field of Riders

SAN MATEO, Calif., Oct. 13, 2023 /PRNewswire/ -- Today, GoPro (NASDAQ: GPRO) announced that it has been named the exclusive action camera of Red Bull Rampage, the legendary big-mountain freeride mountain bike competition held on October 13, 2023, in Utah, USA. The partnership between GoPro and Red Bull Rampage will bring fans closer to the action through immersive rider POV and perspectives only a rugged, durable GoPro camera is capable of capturing.

Fans will experience the thrill of the descent from the rider's POV as they test their skill, physical strength, and mental toughness on the challenging desert terrain. In the competition, the riders will descend from high above the desert canyon, down knife-edge cliffs, into near-vertical chutes, and hit massive jumps and features—in the most spectacular way possible to impress the panel of judges.

GoPro athletes Brendan Fairclough and Bienvenido Aguado Alba are among the world's top riders competing at this year's event. They will capture their runs wearing helmet-mounted GoPro HERO11 Black Mini cameras. The HERO11 Black Mini is a smaller, lighter, simpler version of the GoPro HERO11 Black that features all of the performance of the full-size camera, including GoPro's Emmy® Award-winning HyperSmooth video stabilization.

GoPro is the ultimate mountain bike camera with the ruggedness and mounting flexibility to capture unique perspectives and impossible angles in the toughest terrain. At Red Bull Rampage, GoPro MAX and the new GoPro HERO12 Black cameras will be strategically placed throughout the course to capture all the action—from ramps and natural features to step downs and gap jumps.
