Adtalem Global Education Named One of America's Most Responsible Companies for Second Year

2022-12-08

CHICAGO--(BUSINESS WIRE)-- Adtalem Global Education Inc. (NYSE: ATGE), a national leader in post-secondary education and leading provider of professional talent to the healthcare industry, has been named one of America's Most Responsible Companies 2023 by Newsweek magazine and Statista Inc. Statista is the world-leading statistics portal and industry ranking provider.

America's Most Responsible Companies were selected based on key performance indicators derived from corporate social responsibility (CSR) reports, sustainability reports, and corporate citizenship reports, as well as an independent survey of U.S. residents. Adtalem was included among 400 companies that spanned 14 industries.

"Adtalem is honored to receive this significant recognition by Newsweek and Statista for a second time," said Steve Beard, president and CEO, Adtalem Global Education. "Our family of institutions operates with the mission to expand access to high-quality education and address critical healthcare workforce shortages that ultimately reduce health disparities and improve health equity. We strive to achieve these goals in a transparent, ethical, and responsible manner."

Companies recognized on Newsweek's list are selected based on independent survey data that asked U.S. citizens about their perception of company activities related to corporate social responsibility. Adtalem was also selected based on publicly available key performance indicators derived from the annual sustainability report and supporting content.
