The newly revamped awards program is taking into consideration six key elements across small, medium and large organizations in an effort to shine the spotlight on Inspirers who strive to deliver a better experience for their colleagues and a competitive advantage to their organization. Leaders in each of the elements will be recognized for their achievements at the InspireWork Summit on June 22, 2022 with special honors awarded that night to those who have shown outstanding work across each of these elements:

- Culture & Purpose
- Leadership
- Wellbeing
- Inclusion
- Communication
- Experience

“The people-first mentality at Weave is tangible, and can be felt as soon as you walk through the front door,” said Weave CEO Roy Banks. “We care deeply about enabling our customers to deliver top-notch experiences to the communities and patients they serve, and that begins with us fostering a culture in which everyone is valued, happy, and supported.”

This recognition comes as a continuation of Weave’s record as a company focused on its people. In the past year, Weave has been recognized on the 2022 Shatter List by The Women Tech Council and as a Best Company to Work For by Utah Business Magazine for its people-first culture.
