ATLANTA--(BUSINESS WIRE)-- QumulusAI (Nasdaq: QMLS), a neocloud infrastructure provider purpose-built for the AI computing era, today announced it will ring the opening bell at the Nasdaq MarketSite in New York's Times Square on Wednesday, July 29. The live broadcast will begin at 9:15 a.m. EDT on nasdaq.com/marketsite/bell-ringing-ceremony.

"Ring the Nasdaq bell is a milestone moment in a company's life, and it is a privilege to mark ours," said Michael Maniscalco, CEO of QumulusAI. "We are grateful to the employees, board members, investors, partners and customers who helped us reach this point, and it means a great deal to celebrate it together on Nasdaq's stage."

About QumulusAI

QumulusAI is a distributed AI cloud platform that delivers accelerated access to high-performance GPU compute. Through an inference-first, demand-led deployment model across a network of data center sites, QumulusAI brings compute closer to customer demand, helping AI teams and enterprises scale production AI workloads with speed, flexibility and control. By combining rapid deployment with flexible private cloud infrastructure, QumulusAI gives customers a faster, more adaptable path beyond the capacity constraints of traditional centralized and hyperscale cloud models.
