

NEWS RELEASE

Additional Schedule Changes to Match Reduced Customer Demand Related to COVID-19

4/30/2020

Updated May 18 at 8:30 a.m. CT.

American Airlines will cut capacity in summer 2020 to address record low customer demand, including suspending 70% of domestic and 80% of international capacity for June versus the same period last year. The airline will also delay the start of some international service that was previously announced to begin in May and June. That service is now scheduled to begin operating in June and July, respectively. The updated schedules will be reflected on aa.com starting Sunday, May 3.

American also made additional reductions in service to New York's airports (LGA, JFK and EWR), which will be extended through June 4. From May 6 through June 4, American will operate up to 15 daily flights from New York. Due to government restrictions in the Caribbean and Latin America, American will suspend 85% of its flying from Miami (MIA) through June 4.

See below for details about updated service, including frequency adjustments not previously announced.

UPDATED EUROPE SCHEDULES

Origin	Destination	Schedule change
JFK	London (LHR)	Service resumes June 7, 2x per week
LAX	LHR	Service resumes July 7

ORD	Athens (ATH)	Service resumes June 7
ORD	Dublin (DUB)	Service resumes June 7
ORD	LHR	Service resumes June 4, 5x per week
PHL	LHR	Service resumes July 7
RDU	LHR	Service resumes July 7

UPDATED LATIN AMERICA
SCHEDULES

Origin	Destination	Schedule change
JFK	Buenos Aires (EZE)	Service resumes July 7
JFK	São Paulo (GRU)	Service resumes July 7
MIA	EZE	Service resumes July 7
MIA	Rio de Janeiro (GIG)	Service resumes July 7
MIA	GRU	Service resumes June 4
MIA	Santiago (SCL)	Service resumes June 4

