The year 2012 was one marked by the strengthening of CACI's leadership position in the industry and a transition among the company's senior management team.

Strategy and Development Officer until his retirement in August 2012. Their contributions to CACI's success are deep and lasting, and everyone in the company appreciates their service and thanks them for their dedication and commitment.

Now, with the appointment of two new leaders – Dan Allen as President and CEO and John Mengucci as Chief Operating Officer and President of U.S. Operations – CACI is poised to pursue even more growth within its industry.

Before assuming his current position, Mr. Allen first served as Chief Operating Officer of U.S. Operations and then as President of U.S. Operations. He has championed initiatives promoting growth in CACI's existing markets, expansion of its business base, program performance, and leadership and employee development, positioning CACI to continue its growth momentum.

Joining Mr. Allen in senior management is John Mengucci as Chief Operating Officer and President of U.S. Operations, stepping up from his previous position as Chief Operating Officer of U.S. Operations. Mr. Mengucci brings considerable experience in serving the needs of both federal civilian and defense clients.

To Our

CACI Shareholders

CACI's growth continued with record results for our Fiscal Year 2012.

In Fiscal 2012, we achieved record levels in revenue, net income, earnings per share, and operating cash flow. We attribute this to both our success in capturing new business in high-growth, high-priority areas of our large addressable market and our commitment to operational excellence, which drives strong program performance.

Looking Ahead in Our Addressable Market

As we enter Fiscal Year 2013, our forward indicators are strong. Our funded backlog is almost $2 billion and total backlog is nearly $7.2 billion. This growth in backlog is a result of our diverse portfolio of programs and our focus on growth and high-volume markets. Nearly 70 percent of our expected Fiscal 2013 revenue will come from contracts in hand.

With the government almost certain to begin its new fiscal year operating under a continuing resolution, we believe that almost 99 percent of our projected revenue for Fiscal Year 2013 will come from funds that can be obligated under that legislation. We are confident that we have a strategy in place to successfully navigate the challenges that may occur in our marketplace.

In addition, at the beginning of Fiscal Year 2013, our U.S. Operations had more than $9 billion in submitted proposals under evaluation. Approximately half of that amount is for work that will fuel our growth.

Fiscal Year 2012 was a winning year for our United Kingdom operation as well. We successfully completed the three-year-long Scottish and Irish census projects. We furthered our geographical reach by securing numerous projects in Eastern Europe and Asia. And we acquired two companies, one in the Netherlands and the other in the UK.

Our future performance will be significantly influenced by several important and differentiating elements. First, we have a large and established client base, providing a steady stream of new opportunities.

Second, we offer a broad range of information solutions, services, and products to these clients. And for CACI, these clients are part of a large addressable federal market of potential future CACI clients.

We have divided the market we serve into key areas, each of which provides multi-billion-dollar opportunities for continued expansion. We have the ability to rapidly position the right people and solutions to ensure that we remain closely aligned with our clients' highest priorities at any given time.

One of the factors that differentiates CACI is our record of program performance. Once we win the business, we execute on it extremely well, resulting in our consistently high recompetitiveness rate that protects our base of existing business.

And finally, we believe CACI's culture is a significant differentiator and an important contributor to our performance. Our employees uphold the highest level of ethics and integrity. We streamline processes wherever possible to ensure we operate efficiently and effectively. Even as CACI has
