Beginning with the 2026 NFL season, AEVEX will become a Proud Partner of the Washington Commanders, establishing a significant new brand presence in the National Capital Region.

Beginning with the 2026 NFL season, AEVEX will become a Proud Partner of the Washington Commanders, establishing a significant new brand presence in the National Capital Region and creating opportunities to engage fans, customers, employees, and the defense community through one of the region's most prominent sports platforms.

"Washington D.C. is at the center of the national security community, and the Commanders are one of the most visible and recognizable institutions in the region," said Murali Krishnan, Chief Growth Officer of AEVEX. "This partnership gives AEVEX a powerful platform to build deeper connections across the community while supporting an organization that shares our commitment to teamwork and service. We're proud to join the Commanders and excited about what we can build together."

As part of the agreement, AEVEX will have a prominent presence throughout Commanders home games at Northwest Stadium, including integration with the team's Starting Offensive Lineup feature.

This relationship will extend well beyond gameday. AEVEX will participate in activations surrounding the Commanders' year-round military appreciation programming, with opportunities to recognize and support members of the U.S. military. As part of the team's Salute to Service game, AEVEX will donate tickets to be enjoyed by members of the military. AEVEX will also receive special integration during the Commanders home game coinciding with the Association of the United States Army's (AUSA) Annual Meeting & Exposition in Washington, D.C.

"We're excited to welcome AEVEX as a Proud Partner of the Washington Commanders," said Jim Rushton, Chief Partnerships Officer of the Washington Commanders. "AEVEX operates at the intersection of innovation and service, and we look forward to working together to create meaningful experiences for our fans and the broader military community throughout the season."

The partnership represents a wider investment by AEVEX in building its presence and relationships across the National Capital Region, home to many of the company's customers, industry partners and members of the defense and national security community.

"AEVEX is growing, and with that growth comes an opportunity to introduce our company to a much broader audience," Krishnan added. "The Commanders give us a platform to tell the AEVEX story — who we are, what we stand for and, most importantly, the people and mission behind delivering capabilities for those that need it most."
