

FMC Corporation Issues Annual Sustainability Report

June 6, 2019

'Cultivating Tomorrow,' is the latest report on the sustainability journey of the transformed company

PHILADELPHIA, June 6, 2019 /PRNewswire/ --

FMC Corporation (NYSE: FMC) today released its 2018 report on the Company's global sustainability performance, including progress toward multi-year goals and the future of sustainable agriculture. The report, "Cultivating Tomorrow" is FMC's eighth annual update, and is prepared in accordance with Global Reporting Initiative Standards.

The report describes the Company's progress towards its sustainability goals, product stewardship and community engagement programs, safety record, and commitment to diversity and inclusion. It includes information on the benefits of crop protection products and why they are essential for food security. There are also sections describing new product discovery as well as development and registration processes to help increase understanding on how crop protection products are brought to market.

"Sustainability is a core value for FMC and continues to inform and guide our commercial and research strategies," said Pierre Brondeau, chief executive officer and chairman of FMC. "We are growing the company at a strong rate with sustainable development at the forefront. Our singular focus on agricultural sciences means that FMC can further impact the United Nations Sustainable Development Goal of zero hunger. Every day our teams are working to deliver solutions to farmers that help them protect and increase their crop yields."

Additional information about FMC's sustainability initiatives, including an online copy of the 2018 report, is available at www.FMCsustainability.com.
